

There is the most unmistakable evidence at Washington that the people have been heard from. That from all the loyal States a voice has been heard which it would be idle for the President and Mr. Seward not to heed. The President has said he has great faith in the people. So have we; there is our trust; in God and the people. The day is probably past when Presidents or Cabinet officers can bully the people into any measure which they do not in their hearts approve. A majority of the people are in earn-eat, and are conscientious; they are of the same stamp that used to be known as "Liberty-men," and "Free Soilers." Such men have principles, and will stick to them.— [Machias Rep.]

Mary Ellen Kearney, the young woman who was shot in Roxbury on Monday evening by John Moran, died almost instantly. She was beckoned to the door by Moran who had been attentive to her, and on opening it she was shot through the heart by him, and fell, exclaiming, "O, aunt, I'm dead." Her aunt caught her, but she could say no more and was dead almost instantly. Moran made no remark before he fired and immediately fled but has since been detected.

It appeared that the girl, who was but 19 years old and was very beautiful, had seen a letter received by Moran in which his accomplice stated that the man they had garrotted in Philadelphia had died of his wounds.

giving the amount they had made by the operation and enjoining him to keep dark. Moran made the girl take an oath not to expose him, threatening to shoot her if she did. It is supposed that he killed her to prevent her revealing the knowledge of his crime. She had, however, told her father all about it the evening previous to her death.

The U. S. Senate on Thursday passed a bill authorizing the erection of a bridge over the Mississippi River at St. Louis. It is to be not less than 50 feet above high water, with one span of 600 feet, and with no span measuring less than 200 feet. The breadth of the greater span and the height will prevent the structure being any impediment to the navigation of the river. The erection of this bridge will enable a junction to be formed between various lines of West-ern Railroads.

GOLD DISCOVERY. Gov. McTavish recently passed through St. Paul, Minn., for England. He reports the discovery of large nuggets of gold near Fort Geary in British America, on the lands of the Hudson Bay Company. It has been kept a secret for some time, but the discovery has finally leaked out, and there is much excitement in consequence.

THE POLITICAL PROSPECT. A Washington letter says:—

Some of the best friends of the President assert that he has no desire to make removals, and means to stick to the party that electd him; but the Democrats, who see him offest, assert to the contrary. It is very certain that his position is such that he cannot with any degree of safety make war upon his own party, for if he does, he will find himself at its mercy.

If he interferes at all it will be to carry the Congressional elections, for his heart is set upon a "Democratic" majority in the 4th Congress, if the 39th refuses to give representation to the rebellious States.

IRON FOR THE PACIFIC RAILROAD. Nearly all the rolling mills in the country are now busily engaged in manufacturing iron for the Pacific Railroad. The Bay State Iron Works, of this city, have contracted for 2500 tons, which is now being shipped to

St. Louis for the easterly end of the line.—The law provides that the iron used in the construction of this important railroad shall be of American manufacture.—[Boston Herald.

A GENERAL HINT. At a concert which took place lately, a gentleman in the audience rose up just as the third piece in the programme had been performed, and said: "Mr. Conductor, will you oblige me, sir, by requesting your vocalists to sing louder, or sing in a whisper, as there is conversation going on close by where I sit, that is conducted in such a loud tone as to hinder my enjoyment of the music. I prefer certainly to hear the concert; but if I cannot be so privileged, I desire to hear the conversation." There was an extremely quiet and attentive audience during the rest of the

Going to the Woods. Many years ago, before railroads were ever thought of, a farmer named Barr, who lived near Clinton, Wis., was obliged to travel a distance of fifty miles, with a pack of goods, to the nearest market. He was obliged to take the same means of transportation as himself, each taking a bag of oats to avoid the expense of carrying on the road. Barr's neighbor had advised that he was usually the last one of the barn when the team was led for the night at the "Travelers' Inn," where they were accustomed to "putting on their horses and drive, but that nothing of it all, it so happened that Mr. A. had purchased a quantity of shoes for a neighbor, a knight of the last, and had put them in a bag in his (A.) wagon.

One night, after the team were well cared for, and all were tucked in the bar-room, engaged in a pleasant chat, a slight noise at the barn attracted the attention of A., and, taking a lantern, he proceeded to the barn to learn the cause.

On his way out he met Barr returning from the stable.

"Anything wrong?" inquired A.

"No," said Barr, "better go back."

But A. was a man who wanted to see for himself, and he went on to the barn; but finding nothing out of place, he was about returning, when he discovered that the oats before the team were not out on; and upon examination, he found the bag of oats had been purchased, upon the bag of oats, was found in the half empty, which told the story. Barr had mistaken the bag in the dark, and the theft was discovered.

Returning to the bar-room, A. carefully remarked:

"Fine team, those oats—splendid! I would not be ashamed to drive them myself."

"Yes," said Barr, "feeling himself satisfied, he turned to A. and said: 'No temptation, though; couldn't think of parting with 'em.'"

"Then the oats are yours, eh?" interrogated A.

"Well, they're a fine team, but they won't eat shoes," replied Barr.

"Shoes?" echoed Barr, "what do you mean?"

"Why," replied A., "I mean that your team won't be able to eat shoes for oats; I should advise you to go to the right bag next time."

The others, beginning to see the joke, burst into a perfect yell of laughter; and, over after, laughter was all that was needed to furnish merriment for the whole crowd.

A LITTLE AT A TIME. Dr. Johnson used to say, "He who waits to get a great good at once, will never get it at all. Good things of life seldom come, are soon gone, and when present it is only one among thousands who is adequate to the great occasions that demand them. But there are opportunities at our doors every day, in which the 'small, sweet charities of life' may occupy us fully. What account can we give of these as they pass on to eternity, to lay their record before the great throne? He who flatters himself with air-castles, constructed out of the magnificent schemes he would accomplish, and endowed with great wealth, or exalted to high stations will soon find them dissolving into thin air whenever he calls his heart to an honest account for that which God has already entrusted to his care. He that is unfaithful in that which is the least, is also unfaithful in much."

Human life is made up of a succession of little things, or such as are commonly thought of as trifles. These, if neglected, may grow into a great evil. They are the small, sweet charities of life, which, if neglected, may grow into a great evil. They are the small, sweet charities of life, which, if neglected, may grow into a great evil.

The Newspaper. There is no royal road to learning. The brain, full of knowledge, whose activity sends gleams of light over our daily pathway, has been acquired by hard and constant study. Every book and newspaper which, the careful or ardent reader picks up, is filled with the results of laborious investigation. Take the single issue of a daily paper, and see in its selections of news, in its editorial leaders, in its financial articles, in its book reviews, in its more or less of daily facts, its quips and quiddities, its philosophy and fun, how much care and labor must have been bestowed to furnish it all with the regularity of one's meal. It makes no pretensions. It is furnished to every man for a fraction of what his own or the publisher's labor costs him, and yet it is teeming with thoughts which are constantly influencing his actions, and forming the opinions of his children to govern their after lives.

Into the columns of the daily press come the matured opinions of the greatest thinkers and statesmen of the Old World and the New.—Boston Courier.
